

Evaluating Differences in Rates of Positives for COVID-19 Testing from TestUtah

By Brent C. Satterfield, Ph.D. • Chief Scientific Officer for Co-Diagnostics • June 5, 2020

ABSTRACT – TestUtah samples evaluated at Timpanogos Regional Hospital (Timpanogos) in April showed a lower rate of positives for COVID-19 than the state average. Using statistical analysis of TestUtah’s data since the beginning of April, we analyzed the hypotheses that 1) differences were due to rates of positives within the populations recruited from an online assessment versus those who were referred by a health-care provider and 2) differences were due to laboratory and test-specific processes at Timpanogos. Changes made by the Department of Health (DOH) in the online assessment to recruit people under a similar definition of “symptomatic” used during office visits to health-care providers in the state resulted in a three-fold increase in rate of positives that was statistically indistinguishable from the statewide rate of positives for the same time period ($P = 0.78$). Further, the Timpanogos lab had a significantly higher rate of positives than a Utah-based national reference laboratory for the TestUtah samples ($P = 0.000006$). Taken together, these results highly suggest population differences stemming from a more lenient definition of who qualifies to be tested in the online assessment are responsible for the difference in rates of positives in the past. Using the Department of Health’s standard for who qualifies to be tested, TestUtah results are statistically indistinguishable from statewide averages.

Introduction

When TestUtah started, the objective was to encourage as many Utahns as possible to complete the online survey and be tested. (1) Accordingly, prior to May 2nd, a TestUtah consortium including the Utah Department of Health (DOH), the Governor’s Office of Management and Budget (GOMB), the Leavitt Group, and a consulting group of epidemiologists created a more lenient online assessment to proactively encourage Utahns to be tested in an effort to “crush the curve.”

The initial online assessment listed seventeen different symptoms ranging from general fatigue (eg “I am tired”) to symptoms likely unrelated to COVID-19 (eg “I have a runny nose”) to very specific symptoms for COVID-19 (eg “I have new or increased shortness of breath”). This broad and non-specific definition of “symptomatic” allowed large numbers of people to be tested as per the goals of the consortium. However, shortly after implementation differences in the rates of positives between those recruited through TestUtah’s online assessment and those referred by physicians through a stricter set of criteria became apparent. Governor Herbert said the question of how the rates of positives are affected by who gets tested was “a concern to reconcile so we make sure the results are accurate.” (2)

To better meet national health-care reimbursement criteria, the Department of Health revised the online assessment on May 2nd to include only six symptoms that were much more specific for COVID-19. This brought the assessment more in line with the same definition of “symptomatic” that is used in a health-care provider’s decision to refer a patient for testing during an actual office visit, changing the population of people who were being screened by TestUtah. Since patients who exhibit true symptoms of COVID-19 are more likely to be positive than patients who have unrelated symptoms, we hypothesized that the rate of positives for TestUtah would increase after that change.

As an alternative hypothesis, Bert Lopansri, from Intermountain Healthcare, observed that the differences may be due to the limit of detection of the test or other processes at Timpanogos. (2) In part to test that hypothesis, in May roughly a thousand samples were diverted to a Utah-based national reference laboratory. General Burton, currently executive director of the Utah Department of Health during the COVID-19 outbreak, commented that one of the reasons the reference lab received the samples was “to confirm the new machines (at Timpanogos) produced accurate results.” (3)

After nearly two months of operation by TestUtah, there are now sufficient data points to do statistical analysis of each of these hypotheses. Here, we present the data and the statistical analysis to reveal the underlying causes of the differences in the rates of positives.

Methods

Qualtrics is under contract with the state to manage and process the data for TestUtah. Qualtrics provided the rate of positives for TestUtah from April 1st to May 24th in a personal communication on May 28, 2020 (Appendix A). This time period covered a change in the definition of who was sufficiently “symptomatic” to be tested that was implemented in the online assessment on May 2nd (Appendix G shows the initial assessment and Appendix H shows the May 2nd assessment). A separate data set was also provided for just the data from the Utah-based national reference lab for samples collected by TestUtah from May 7 to May 11 (table with data summary in Appendix A, raw data in Appendix F).

Data from the State of Utah were extracted from graphs on the state’s website for each of the days that Timpanogos received samples from TestUtah, excluding May 7 to May 11 where the majority of samples were sent to the Utah-based reference lab (Appendix B). (4) Rates of positives for the state during that time period were calculated from the total number of negatives and positives reported.

Statistical analysis was done by two-way T-test to evaluate significant differences between 1) Timpanogos’s own results before and after the May 2nd change in the definition of who was sufficiently “symptomatic” to be tested (samples collected between May 7 and May 11 which were primarily tested by the Utah-based reference lab were excluded from this analysis) (Appendix C) 2) The rate of positives between Timpanogos and the state of Utah after the change in definition (Appendix D) and 3) the rate of positives found by Timpanogos versus the Utah-based national reference lab following the May 2nd change (Appendix E).

Averages of the results were plotted in bar charts with standard error of the mean. P-values were also reported where results were significant.

Results and Discussion

The rate of positives at Timpanogos before and after the May 2nd change in the online assessment were compared to evaluate the effects of using the more stringent definition of who is sufficiently symptomatic to be tested (Figure 1). In support of our hypothesis, the population of people recruited under the new definition in the online assessment had more than triple the rate of positives when compared to those under the more lenient definition ($P = 0.00000007$).

In fact, this rate of positives was statistically indistinguishable from the statewide averages for the same time period (Figure 2, $P = 0.78$). This suggests that the definition of who is sufficiently symptomatic to be tested is responsible for the difference in rates of positives between TestUtah and the statewide averages observed in April. Whatever the cause, in May, there was no statistically significant difference between rates of positives between these two groups.

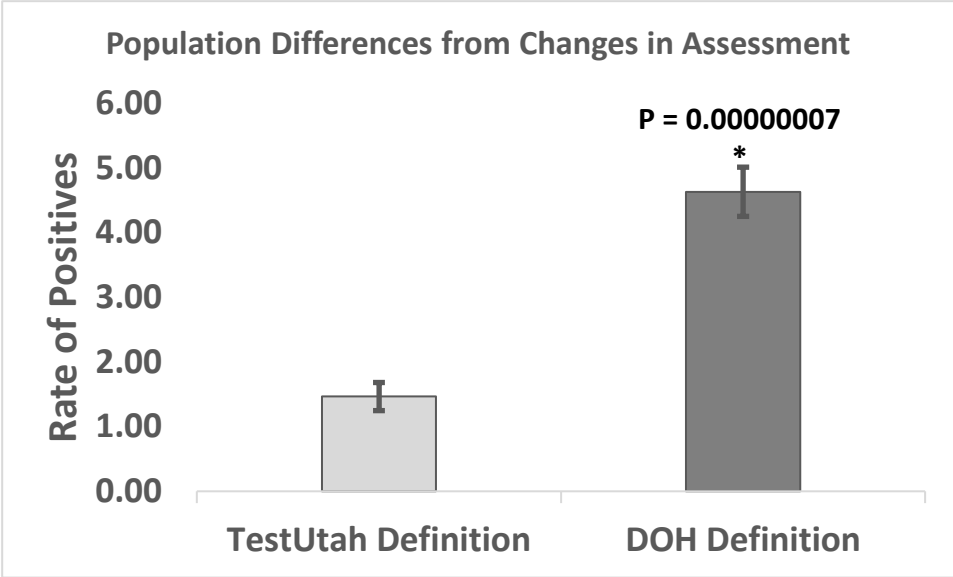

Figure 1. Shows that using Utah Department of Health’s (DOH) definition of who is sufficiently symptomatic to be tested creates a significant difference ($P = 0.00000007$) in the rate of positives relative to the original definition from the TestUtah consortium.

Figure 2. Shows that there is no statistically significant difference in the rate of positives between Timpanogos and the state when using the same criteria of who is sufficiently “symptomatic” to be tested ($P = 0.78$).

To rule out other potential laboratory-specific contributing factors to the differences in rates of positives, we analyzed test results from the Utah-based reference lab and Timpanogos for TestUtah samples. Following the May 2nd change in definition, roughly a thousand samples collected over five days were sent to the Utah-based reference lab for testing.

Again confirming our hypothesis, Timpanogos not only did not detect less positives than the Utah-based reference lab, it detected significantly more positives ($P = 0.000006$, Figure 3) matching the statewide rates. This further confirms that differences in rates of positives in the early testing phase were not due to laboratory-specific conditions such as limit of detection, equipment, or other validation processes at Timpanogos.

As to why the Utah-based reference lab detected less positives in the TestUtah samples than Timpanogos and the statewide rates, it could be that the length of time it took for the samples to be processed resulted in sample degradation. One hundred and twenty-four samples at the national reference laboratory took more than six days from collection until results were uploaded, with some taking as long as eight days. However, by the last day results were reported in just over twenty-four hours for the majority of samples and the rates of positives were still lower than state averages, effectively ruling out degradation due to slow processing as the reason for differences.

Offering another possibility, Julio Delgado, Chief Medical Officer for the reference lab, said, “The specimen volumes were insufficient for us to be able to provide accurate test results, even using the method our laboratory worked overnight to validate to perform the TestUtah tests.” (3) It is possible that the reference lab’s lower rate of detection in these samples is from the modifications that had to be made overnight to accommodate specimen volumes. In contrast, the testing setup by Timpanogos is optimized for use with lower volumes, allowing it to achieve the same rate of positives as seen in the state averages. In either event, the rate of positives in these samples suggests that Timpanogos may be better suited for both receiving and screening the TestUtah samples.

Conclusion

In conclusion, following the online assessment change, Timpanogos is detecting the same rate of positives as the state average. This suggests that earlier differences resulted from differences in rates of positives between those who are truly symptomatic versus those who have potentially unrelated symptoms. The failure of the Utah-based national reference laboratory to find more positives in the TestUtah samples than Timpanogos further supports this conclusion. Those with symptoms more specific to COVID-19 are more likely to be positive than those without symptoms or with more general symptoms. This data may have application in other states, such as in Iowa and Nebraska, where differences in rates of positives are observed between patients who self-diagnose in online assessments versus those referred by a physician according to a stricter set of criteria.

* Rate of positives is calculated from the positives divided by the sum of positives and negatives. This value specifically excludes samples marked inconclusive or no result.

^a The number of days in the table is different from the number of days reported by the reference lab in the Salt Lake Tribune. (3) The dates reported here are the dates the sample were collected from the patient, not the dates the samples were actually tested. The TestUtah samples collected over these five days were sent to the reference lab.

^b The Utah-based reference lab reported in the Salt Lake Tribune that they processed 1,005 samples with another 10% that were unable to be processed. (3) However, only 999 processed samples were uploaded to Qualtrics by the reference lab with 87 that remained unprocessed. The samples in the table are those that were uploaded to Qualtrics.

ABBY TEST - UT COVID19 - Initial Assessment

Start of Block: intro

Q1

If ever there was a time in which the State of Utah needed the collective action of its citizens, that time would be now. By participating in this optional assessment (in which you may opt out at any point), you are not only helping yourself, your family, and your community—you're helping to best mobilize vital resources in the fight against COVID-19. In Utah, we value the role of limited government and recognize that asking citizens to provide personal information may be uncomfortable and concerning to some. However, users can be assured that their personal data will be used exclusively for the purpose of fighting COVID-19 and will be destroyed once the immediate threat of the virus subsides. By clicking ACCEPT below you agree to share your contact information and assessment responses with the State of Utah. You also agree to the terms and conditions and privacy policy. The platform where your data is stored has a comprehensive set of controls that meet various security requirements. Those requirements include ISO 27001 and HITRUST. Please note: It is important that every person in your household fill out their own assessment. Upon completing the assessment you will be receiving follow up communications via text and email. Thank you for doing your part in helping 'Utah Lead Together' against the spread of COVID-19. This assessment is provided by the State of Utah.

Q3

If ever there was a time in which the State of Utah needed the collective action of its citizens, that time would be now. By participating in this optional assessment (in which you may opt out at any point), you are not only helping yourself, your family, and your community—you're helping to best mobilize vital resources in the fight against COVID-19. In Utah, we value the role of limited government and recognize that asking citizens to provide personal information may be uncomfortable and concerning to some. However, users can be assured that their personal data will be used exclusively for the purpose of fighting COVID-19 and will be destroyed once the immediate threat of the virus subsides. By clicking ACCEPT below you agree to share your contact information and assessment responses with the State of Utah. You also agree to the terms and conditions and privacy policy. The platform where your data is stored has a comprehensive set of controls that meet variou

Please note: It is important that every person in your household fill out their own assessment. Upon completing the assessment you will be receiving follow up communications via text and email. Thank you for doing your part in helping 'Utah Lead Together' against the spread of COVID-19. This assessment is provided by the State of Utah.
